SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT GOALS

The sustainable development goals (SDGs) are a collection of 17 global goals set by the United Nations in 2015 for the year 2030. The SDGs are part of resolution 70/1 of the United Nations General Assembly, the 2030 Agenda.

These goals are interrelated, although each one has its own specific aims, representing a total of 169 aims. The SDGs cover a wide range of social and economic development issues such as (Poverty-hunger-health-education, climate change, gender, water, sanitation, energy, environment, social justice).

Although the SDGs are not legally binding, they are owned by governments and developed national frameworks to achieve the goals. So, it is the responsibility of the countries to monitor and review progress, which requires the collection of qualitative data that can be easy to access in time. The goals are broad based and interdependent. The 17 sustainable development goals each have a list of targets which are measured with indicators. In an effort to make the SDGs successful.
